Every Family's Nightmare

8.30pm, SBS One

DNA evidence is a fantastic tool for solving crimes but, as attested by anyone who has seen my attempts at using a piping bag to ice a gingerbread man, a tool is only as good as the skill of the person wielding it. A couple of recent legal cases have shown that charges were brought against people using DNA evidence where poor handling techniques resulted in false positives. It demonstrates that DNA is perhaps being relied on too heavily in the absence of other corroborating evidence. Melbourne man Farah Jama had a six-year sentence for rape overturned after 16 months in jail, while this documentary tells the story of 15-year-old Perth schoolboy Patrick Waring, who was also arrested for a rape he didn't commit. This riveting documentary follows Waring and his family through the hideous and costly ordeal to prove his innocence.

Lowdown

9pm, ABC1

A couple of weeks ago I said that week's episode of Lowdown was the season finale. This is because I am what is technically known as an idiot. The actual season finale is here and it sees Alex (Adam Zwar, pictured) attempting to get away to a spa for some recreation. This comedy about a gossip columnist is very formulaic and predictable, but during the course of the first season the humour (which will have a ring of truth for anyone working in the media) usually won out.

Hotter Than My Daughter

9.30pm, LifeStyle You

Nothing good comes from uttering the above statement. Maybe if you were to say "because I was sitting closer than she was to the heater, I'm now hotter than my daughter", but that's it. Since I am handing out these edicts, you should also never go clubbing with your daughter. Not that all mothers have to be June Cleaver, but there's a time to act like a teenager and that's when you're a teenager. This odd Welsh makeover series, in which members of the public vote on whether an, ahem, outgoing mother, or her disapproving daughter need a new look, breezes through the makeovers. This leaves plenty of time for animal print-clad ladies, who are exclusively dressed by Strippers R Us, to announce they are indeed hotter than their daughters. Perhaps their offspring's sense of mortification is dampening their innate hotness.

Law & Order: Criminal Intent

9.30pm, Ten

If all those dance movies I've wasted my life watching are to be believed, dance schools are a cutthroat world where fellow classmates would strangle you with a tutu as soon as look at you. So when detectives Nichols (Jeff Goldblum) and Stevens (Saffron Burrows) investigate the death of a ballet dancer at the Schuman Centre for the Performing Arts, the problem is not finding a prime suspect but in narrowing it down to just one person. Especially when the harsh instructor is certainly guilty of being an arrogant tool. It's an enjoyable episode, but there is a distinct feeling that this and SVU are going through the motions. When they cancelled the original Law & Order recently — despite that show's strongest season, story-wise, in years — it's a shame they didn't drop the axe on the entire franchise.
